1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the general principles of the theory of the structure of the atom.

2. In the second part, the author discusses the results of the experiments of Rutherford and his colleagues, which have shown that the atom is not a homogeneous mass, but is composed of a central nucleus and a surrounding cloud of electrons.

3. The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results of the experiments of Bohr and his colleagues, which have shown that the electrons in the atom are arranged in discrete orbits, and that the energy of the atom is quantized.

4. In the fourth part, the author discusses the results of the experiments of Heisenberg and his colleagues, which have shown that the position and momentum of a particle cannot be known simultaneously with arbitrary accuracy.

5. The fifth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results of the experiments of Schrodinger and his colleagues, which have shown that the wave function of a particle satisfies a differential equation, and that the probability of finding the particle in a given region is proportional to the square of the magnitude of the wave function.

6. In the sixth part, the author discusses the results of the experiments of Dirac and his colleagues, which have shown that the electron is a spin-1/2 particle, and that its spin is related to its magnetic moment.

7. The seventh part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results of the experiments of Pauli and his colleagues, which have shown that the Pauli exclusion principle applies to fermions, and that the Pauli exclusion principle is a consequence of the antisymmetry of the wave function of a system of identical fermions.

8. In the eighth part, the author discusses the results of the experiments of Fermi and his colleagues, which have shown that the Fermi-Dirac statistics apply to fermions, and that the Fermi-Dirac statistics are a consequence of the Pauli exclusion principle.

9. The ninth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the results of the experiments of Bose and his colleagues, which have shown that the Bose-Einstein statistics apply to bosons, and that the Bose-Einstein statistics are a consequence of the symmetry of the wave function of a system of identical bosons.
